Photos depicting furniture manufacturing in North Carolina just before and during the rise of the industry in the state in the 1940s.

North Carolina was known until very recently as the "Furniture Capital of the World." Access to raw supplies and inexpensive labor propelled the growth of the furniture industry in North Carolina at the turn of the last century. In 1911, the Southern Furniture Manufacturers' Association was founded with headquarters in High Point, NC, "to promote harmony among manufacturers of furniture, secure concessions in freight rates... and further the

"A merchant in Lowgap named Truman N. Woodruff sold galax leaves to florists in New York City, starting in 1907. He hired local women to pick the galax, sort it, and bundle it for shipping. A woman could pick as many as 10,000 leaves in a day. The business lasted until artificial greenery took the place of real leaves, at least into the 1920's."—Oakley History

The leaves in this photo are clearly not galax leaves. This note added by the North Carolina State Archives, 1 May 2009.

If you want the text I paraphrased for the Oakley History website, you can find it here—"Visitor's Guide 40: City Gets Its Name from a Lovely Leaf" www.lcn4.com/pages/specialsections/055/VisitorsGuide/VG4..., accessed 11-23-2007, as listed in my sources for the information on the website. Too bad the writer at the North Carolina Conservation and Development Department was not as well-trained by his/her English teachers as I was to document sources and use quotation marks :-)

ConDev412C Nu-Wray Hotel

In March of 2009, a researcher added this information to the identification of this photo:

"Once a stagecoach stop for travelers to Asheville, the Nu Wray is the oldest continuously operating inn in western North Carolina. This great landmark is centrally located on the south side of Burnsville's Town Square, the heart of the historic downtown area.

Operating for 170 years -- since 1833 -- "one of the last pioneer Inns, has hosted such personalities as Mark Twain, Elvis Presley, Thomas Wolfe, O'Henry, and Christopher Reeve.

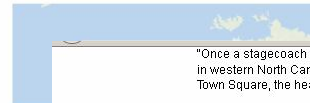

"The warm lobby has a large fireplace in use all winter and even cooler summer evenings. Located in a small mountain town, the NuWray Inn provides a great place to getaway, relax in the porch rockers, read by the fire, or play a game of horseshoes or a board game."

Reference Services for Non-Textual Materials

The Non-Textual Materials Unit provides reference services to the general public, historians, genealogists, publishers, interior designers, advertising agencies, news agencies, and any other individuals or entities desiring to use the collections. Researchers should contact the Non-Textual Materials Archivist in advance of a visit. Often our staff is able to assist researchers by e-mail and telephone, and an in-person visit may not be required. We can make copies of most of the photographs, images, videos, and digital media in our collections for reasonable fees, and we work with local vendors to provide copies of analog audio and motion picture film as necessary.

February 1960 Raleigh Sit-ins

Thumbnails Detail CommentsSlideshowShare

February 1, 2010, marks the 50th anniversary of the historic Sit-In at the lunch counter of Woolworth's in Greensboro, NC. The heroic action of the "Greensboro Four" on February 1, 1960, launched the Civil Rights movement and altered the course of history. Within days sit-ins were being held in Raleigh, NC, at the lunch counters of Woolworth's, Eckerd's, and other similar stores, and protestors thronged the streets of Raleigh and those of cities and towns throughout the South -- united in their desire for equal rights, empowered by the bravery of four young students in Greensboro.

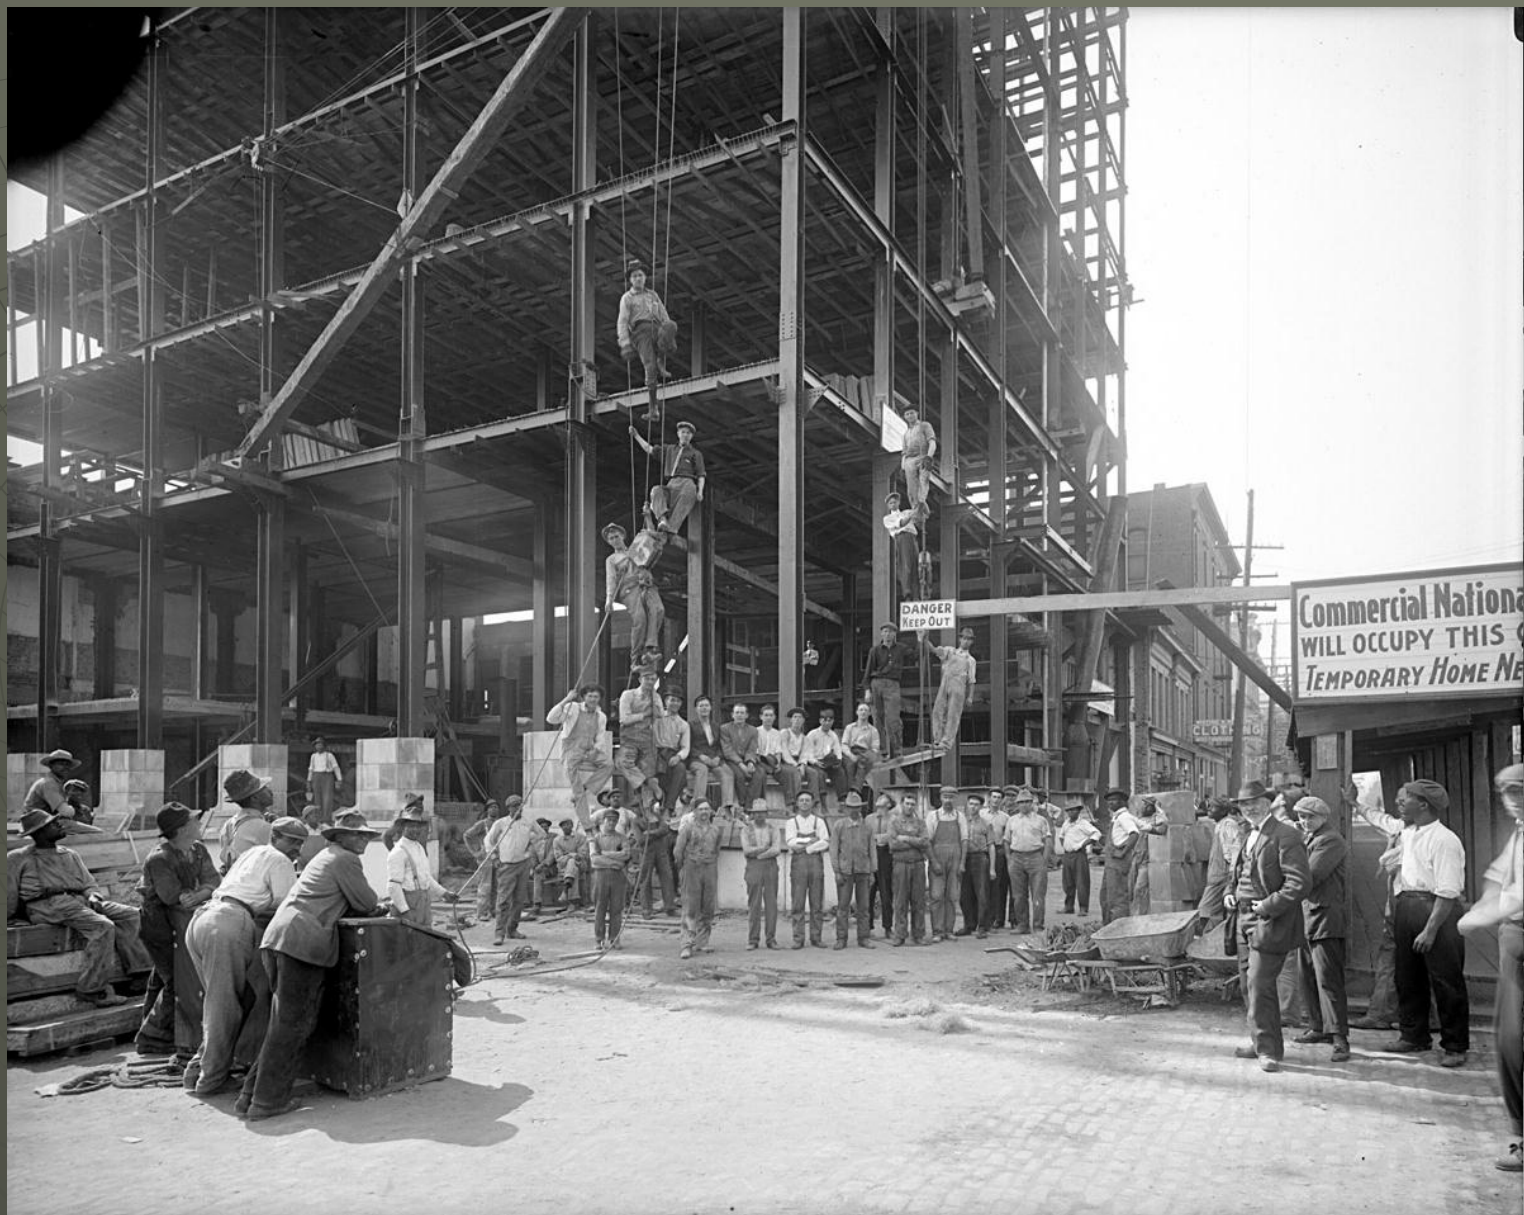

Here are just a few photographs of the February 1960 happenings in Raleigh from the Raleigh News & Observer's vast negative collection housed at the North Carolina State Archives in Raleigh.
